FDA Statement

INTRODUCTION

The Food and Drug Administration (hereafter called FDA) of the Public Health Service of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, established in Washington, DC 20204, United States of America, is the world's best known authority involved in consumer protection in respect of potential detrimental influences, which could be caused by any inclusion of substances or ingredients of an unacceptable nature in foodstuffs and confectionery.

The FDA has prepared a review ("Title 21: Code of Federal Regulations") in respect of their approval of the raw materials used in the manufacture of roller coverings intended for the transport of foodstuffs. This review refers to the raw materials in a processed or finished state, and also specifies the conditions under which the approval is valid.
